Words From Home

Statements That May Be Investigated
Testimony of Norway Citizens.

When a Norway citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. "Home endorsement" is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Norway resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

W. O. Nedham, retired farmer, Main St., Norway, Me., says:—"Doan's Kidney Pills are the only kidney medicine I use, and they always give me relief. I never had any serious kidney trouble, but sometimes when I caught cold my kidneys were weakened. Several years ago I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills, and I began using them. They got my kidneys working right, and after that was done, the uric poison in my system was removed. I have obtained Doan's Kidney Pills at Stone's Drug Store, and I know that they can be relied on."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cts. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and no other.

Beatrice stood in front of the mirror gently smoothing her nose. Yes it was all straight and all there, just as it had been last night, so what could Uncle Jack have meant by saying that she would wake up this morning and find it broken? She thought it would look as though the cackling worm still lingered there.

Yet the sweetness of its fragrance never leaves.

Obscure our eyes, or whether always fair, it so, this thought the latest being thrills.

With some disappointment, she cast a glance at the disappointed, pained, and tearful, "I shall be satisfied just over there."

Making Sunshine.

By LUDIA F. LORD.

The world would not look so dreary, and life would not be half as sad, if we could make somebody happy.

If we could make somebody glad, if we could make somebody smile.

Let your good deeds find you out, someone cannot do without you, and someone who loves you no doubt.

Scatter your crumbs on the water; hoard not your silver or gold; give to the poor, and they will love you.

And care for you when you are old. Poverty stings like an adder, but love lightens labor and sorrow.

With a mantle of peace it enfolds. Then hasten along, O my brother, and let the world be so long.

That brings love and peace to another, and gives to their life a glad song.

Joseph Andrews' Letters.

No. XIV.

And now I will continue my travels on down the river, passing the old time schoolhouse in the woods, on past the old tannery (Wiley's I think) to the old Jewett Haley and Willis Mansfield's farms. Mrs. Haley (nee Colby) was a first cousin of mine and twenty years ago I enjoyed several pleasant visits to the Haley and Mansfield homes.

Mrs. Mansfield (nee Charles) was one of my West Fryeburg schoolmates and her mother, Mrs. Osborn Charles was, I think a life long resident of West Fryeburg. Twenty years bring many changes. Both farms are now in the hands of strangers and the older members of each family have been laid away while the younger members of both families now growing old and gray, have sought homes elsewhere.

Of the Haley's I shall speak later. Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield I found living in a pleasant home farther down the road near the Universalist church where I dined with them and had a very pleasant two hour visit in which we reviewed many of the changes that have taken place in the 45 years that had passed since first we met.

My next stopping place was at the home of Abraham Gray, who owns a fine stock and dairy farm just out of the village of old Mudd City, now known by the modern name of North Fryeburg. Mrs. Gray (nee Julia Head) was one of my Lovell Center schoolmates and as I had not met her since my school boy days, we had much to talk about.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray have had five children, all of whom I think but one, Harry, a young man of much promise who died not long ago of that dread disease, infantile paralysis.

At the Harry L. Hutchins store, I paused for a little rest and lapsed into a reminiscent mood. I remembered that some forty-five years ago Bell Martin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gravel Martin was one of the prettiest girls to be found in Lovell town and it was there that Harry's father found and won her as his bride. I have not met her since but I was told that Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins had prospered and retired from business and were spending the summer at their cottage home on Lake Kizir.

Close by the village a large canning factory was running full blast where large quantities of Maine's popular brand of sweet corn was being packed for shipment to the west, where, owing to its superior quality it finds a ready sale in competition with that packed in the west.

My next stopping place was at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Andrews (Mrs. Andrews nee Amelia Head) and sister of Mrs. Gray, was another old schoolmate of mine at Lovell Center school. They have a fine home and I enjoyed my over night's visit with them very much. They have two children, Edith, who is married and Langdon, a student, who is striving to obtain a higher education. The next morning continuing my tramp on down the valley I saw many familiar scenes but the faces that I saw were all stranger faces. The beautiful level and productive farms and fine houses and well filled barns remind me very much of the prairie west but on a much smaller scale. At one of the houses I saw a sign that read "The Seavey sent by Mrs. Etta H. Osgood to a dear old friend of hers, Mrs. Kate Fifehead. Mrs. Fifehead was 89 years old, a smart old lady still able to read without glasses and her fervent "God bless you" as I bade her good bye is still fresh in my memory as one of the most pleasant of my last summer experiences.

Retracing my steps from the Seavey home I soon left the intervals behind and after a two mile walk along the sandy road and pine clad hills with here and there a cozy farm house to break the monotony of my walk. I arrived at the home of Joseph Kimball in Stow where with his wife and mother have a pleasant quiet home in this neck of the woods and judging from the many fine clumps of white pine trees that are growing on their many acres, I should judge that they were well to financially. Mr. Kimball was one of my school boy friends and mates in the years of long ago, and it was a great pleasure to spend a day and night beneath their kindly roof and talk about olden times. Grandmother Kimball, 82 years old, was bright and active and her mind was as clear as in her younger days. Mr. and Mrs. Kimball have three children all married and settled near home. This was my third visit to Stow. Four years ago when I visited at the same home and for the first time the family of Jewett Haley who was then living on a farm near Stow Corner. Jewett and his brother Amos, were at that time two of the leading citizens of Stow, and did much to bring along the social and religious activities of the town. Largely through their efforts the Union, now the M. E. church was built at Stow Corner. I remember the occasion when my former schoolmate, George Morey, Bernice Grover, Mattie and Fay Lord, Linwood Flint went with a party from North Waterford. A fine time was reported.

Getting rid of Brown-tails. In Manchester, N. H., it is said that the city is receiving a benefit, this summer, in the way of getting rid of the brown-tail moths, by the adoption of a new form of globe on the ark street lights. The new half-globes on the ark lights are encasing the destruction of thousands of brown-tail moths and would seem to have fulfilled the purpose for which they were designed. From various parts of the city it is reported that from a pin to nine quarts have been found by employees of the traction company making their daily rounds to clean out the globes.

The conference of the Superintendents and Principals of the State of Maine was held at Castine, through the week of July 8th. There was a large attendance at the meetings, which were specially encouraging to State Superintendent, Payson Smith, and the interest shown exceeded that of any of the previous conferences.

The various subjects concerning school education, both Grammar and High school were taken up and talked over with an end to discovering better methods for school work of all kinds, and in order to do this, we must make a careful analysis to attain and determine facts, habits, ideals, power, etc., which are necessary for such lines of work.

The conference need to be carefully revised in many cases, with a view to determine subjects, or group of subjects, best adapted to these ends.

We should study the needs of each student more carefully in order to prescribe the studies which he individually needs. We must have more adequate tests to measure the attainment of each pupil. In order to do this, recitations should be shifted from mere memorization of facts and purposes, to the real essential, and a greater reliance should be placed on the judgment of the teacher and the principal.

The Crops and the High Cost of Living.

The decrease in the per capita output from the farms this year will tend to increase the cost of living in the United States. It is a fallacy to expect that because the crop, as a result of high prices, may prove very valuable, the country at large will be greatly benefited. The farmer will, of course, be benefited should the local crop be increased. It does not need to be proved, however, that rising living costs are not merely local to the United States, but are an international affliction. The question of high cost of living in the United States is a question of the cost of living here, which is already high from some deeper cause or combination of causes. [Boston Post]

Good Roads Campaign.

The Maine State Board of Trade, ever zealous in its championship of improved highways, reminds the Boards throughout the State that there is opportunity for effective work in the campaign about being inaugurated in Maine.

At the State Board's semi-annual meeting in March the Maine Legislature was strongly urged to submit to the voters an amendment to the constitution enabling the State to issue bonds for the purpose of devoting to the building and maintenance of State highways. The Maine Automobile Association, the Maine Hotel Proprietors' Association and other business organizations active in this movement and the outcome was that the Maine Legislature, assembled in special session, granted the request.

This important matter is therefore to come up for consideration at the September session. Members of boards of trade and business organizations throughout Maine are urged to be vigilant to the end that the proposed amendment be given a passage by a large majority, thus assuring notable progress in behalf of Good Roads.

The farmer will, of course, be benefited should the local crop be increased. It does not need to be proved, however, that rising living costs are not merely local to the United States, but are an international affliction. The question of high cost of living in the United States is a question of the cost of living here, which is already high from some deeper cause or combination of causes. [Boston Post]

WHAT MAKES A WOMAN?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. It is the mind, the heart, the soul, the health and strength, and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and all the listless, worn-out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Edna Pool, Depew, Okla. "and I thank you with all my heart, for making such a good medicine." Only 50c. Good Roads Campaign.

The Maine State Board of Trade, ever zealous in its championship of improved highways, reminds the Boards throughout the State that there is opportunity for effective work in the campaign about being inaugurated in Maine.

At the State Board's semi-annual meeting in March the Maine Legislature was strongly urged to submit to the voters an amendment to the constitution enabling the State to issue bonds for the purpose of devoting to the building and maintenance of State highways. The Maine Automobile Association, the Maine Hotel Proprietors' Association and other business organizations active in this movement and the outcome was that the Maine Legislature, assembled in special session, granted the request.

This important matter is therefore to come up for consideration at the September session. Members of boards of trade and business organizations throughout Maine are urged to be vigilant to the end that the proposed amendment be given a passage by a large majority, thus assuring notable progress in behalf of Good Roads.

The Crops and the High Cost of Living.

The decrease in the per capita output from the farms this year will tend to increase the cost of living in the United States. It is a fallacy to expect that because the crop, as a result of high prices, may prove very valuable, the country at large will be greatly benefited. The farmer will, of course, be benefited should the local crop be increased. It does not need to be proved, however, that rising living costs are not merely local to the United States, but are an international affliction. The question of high cost of living in the United States is a question of the cost of living here, which is already high from some deeper cause or combination of causes. [Boston Post]

Preserving Eggs.

There are a great many farmers who do not have eggs enough for their own use during the winter but probably all such farmers have plenty of eggs during the summer and sell them at low prices. If during the season of low prices, the farmer would preserve fifty or a hundred dozen eggs, he could provide his family with plenty of eggs during the winter and have his fresh eggs to sell at high prices.

Regarding the methods and the scientific reasons for them in the preservation of eggs longer than the natural keeping period, E. A. Vinson, in an article recently printed in Coleman's Rural World, said that the preserving material seals up the pores in the shell and prevents the entrance of bacteria and air as well as evaporation and consequent shrinkage of the egg contents. The old method of greasing the shell to make the eggs keep better depended on this fact. Such eggs cannot be boiled because the impervious shells do not permit the escape of the enclosed air, which expands when heated and bursts open the egg. By serving the commoner purpose, the preserved egg economizes the fresh egg, for which there is an ever-increasing demand for use as raw food in the treatment of certain diseases.

When the eggs are to be kept for a short time only, one of the usual methods of packing is sufficient. For this purpose they are imbedded in some fine material, such as dry bran, oats, sawdust, or salt. Care must be taken that the packing material is dry and free from must. There is always danger of losing the eggs by the growth of mould on the inside of the shell, as the writer has frequently observed. A better way is said to be the use of egg shelves. These are arranged in cool, dry place and are provided with holes so that the eggs may be stood on end. Handled in this way eggs are said to keep better than when packed. Preserving in some chemical solution is, however, a much safer method for general use.

There are two solutions commonly used for preserving eggs, each of which has its advantages and disadvantages. Lime-water Method.—The commonest and oldest preservative is lime-water. A few lumps of quicklime are placed in a large vessel of water, and after the excess of lime has settled out, the clear liquid is poured over perfectly fresh eggs in a clean jar. A very small amount of the clear lime may then be added to replace the lime which will be separated out by the action of the air. After a few days a thick crust will form on the surface, which should not be disturbed, for it prevents evaporation and excludes the air. Some add salt to the lime-water and claim it improves the quality of the eggs. Lime-water preserved eggs will keep well and are serviceable for all purposes excepting to fry, the yolks not holding up well and the eggs being apt to become watery. There is a great tendency for the whites to become watery, but this does not render the egg unwholesome. They are just as serviceable for baking and for other purposes as fresh eggs, excepting that the whites cannot be beaten. The great advantage of this method is the ease with which lime may be obtained as it is readily accessible in the most remote places.

Water Glass Method.—The other common preservative is water glass. This is diluted with from 10 to 20 parts of water, but even greater dilutions will serve when eggs are to be kept a short time only. We have observed that the stronger the water glass solution, the less apt the yolks are to break when fried. Water glass gives better results than lime water, but is difficult to obtain and quite expensive away from commercial centers. It should be given the preference wherever available, although very fair results can be obtained with lime-water. One preserves 1 in 5 per cent water glass solution was still in good condition the following March.

It is absolutely essential that eggs for preserving be perfectly fresh. They should be preserved within 24 to 36 hours after being laid. It is not safe to preserve eggs whose history is not known, such as those obtained from dealers. By following one of these formulas a fall and winter supply of cheap eggs may be had which is fully as serviceable for most purposes as high priced fresh eggs and which will not have that peculiar stale taste so characteristic of shipped cold-storage eggs.

NORTH LOVELL.

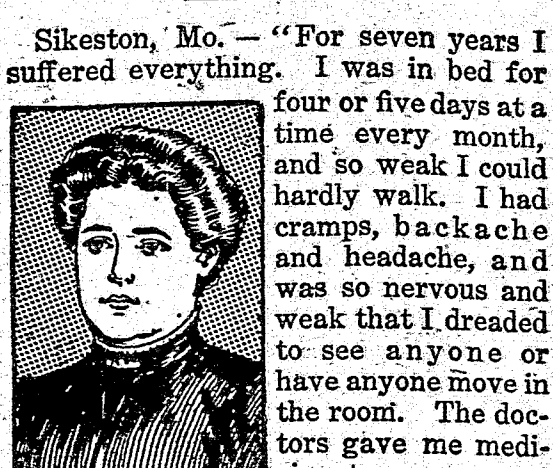

Grand Celebration.
The 4th of July celebration under the auspices of Keweenaw Lake Grange was a success socially and financially, although the weather was extremely hot, the large crowd seemed reasonably cool and comfortable. There was plenty of ice cream, lemonade, fruit and confectionery, a fine dinner and supper, the best of music by Garcelon's orchestra for dancing, plenty of fireworks to satisfy "Young America's" love of noise and a general good time was the result. Everything passed off well, there was no accident and the large crowd was orderly and as a whole it was a memorable celebration.

Mrs. Sophia McAllister visited in East Stoneham, Sunday.
Mrs. Isabel Brooks was in Lovell several days last week.
Bennie McAllister has been at home the past two weeks.

Mrs. Joan McAllister of West Lovell has been staying with relatives the past week. She is 84 years old but is remarkably active and retains her faculties in a truly wonderful manner.
Mrs. Carrie Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harriman and three children came from Norway, Thursday, in their new automobile. Mrs. Carrie Harriman and her grandchildren, Guy and Edna, will stay and visit with friends for several weeks.

Woods Getting Dry.
"The woods are getting to be very dry and the danger from forest fires is great," said State Forest Commissioner, Frank B. Mace, upon his return from a trip to the lookout stations.
The sentinel and patrol are using their utmost vigilance and the men are required to keep in touch with the station. The fire loss thus far has been small considering the number of fires reported.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me in these times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

Hugh J. Chisholm.

Hugh J. Chisholm, who died in New York, July 8, at the age of 65 years, 2 months and 6 days, formerly lived in Rumford Falls.
Mr. Chisholm began life with apparently nothing, and by his own industry and energy, became a successful paper manufacturer in the state. And in 1882 when the village of Rumford Falls was hardly more than a wilderness, Mr. Chisholm on invitation of Hon. Waldo Pettengill came there and saw the great possibilities in harnessing the water power. He saw a future for the village and organized the Rumford Falls Paper Co. and built a mill. This in a few years was merged with other mills all over the country, forming the International Paper Co., with $55,000,000 capital and a production of 100,000 tons of paper annually.
Mr. Chisholm has devoted much time to travel, both in this country and abroad, and was a broad minded, scholarly and philanthropic man, and it was largely through his endeavors that Rumford Falls is what it is today.

Mr. Chisholm married Henrietta Mason of Portland, Sept. 5, 1872, who survives him. He is also survived by one son, Hugh Chisholm, Jr., who has been abroad and was summoned home on account of the illness of his father in April. The remains were brought to Portland, where the funeral was held Wednesday afternoon.
Interment took place at Evergreen cemetery, Portland.

Now Comes a Change.

It is announced that the Maine Central railroad has acquired control of the Bridgton and Saco River road. This is probably the first step toward the absorption of that line by the greater concern.
With its passing, Maine will lose a picturesque feature of its transportation system—because the Maine Central will probably adopt standard gauge and equipment. The Bridgton and Saco River is now a narrow gauge line. Its diminutive engines and toy cars have long been a source of wonder and delight to the summer visitor. But the old order changeth, especially in that particular section of the State.
We have recently seen the passing of the Fryeburg horse railroad. Now Bridgton loses the steam road that was among its distinctive features. The change should prove a good thing for Bridgton and the surrounding country, although the little engine and small cars will long be held in fond recollection by thousands who found the ride from the junction to Bridgton a novel and not unpleasant experience.

The front cover, on the right, is dark and appears to be made of a similar material, but it is severely damaged, with large areas of discoloration, staining, and what looks like mold or rot. A vertical line runs down the center, separating the spine from the cover. The overall image is very grainy and noisy, with a high-contrast, almost binary appearance.
